

I chose to make my final project about my hometown, Chicago. The city means a lot to me, and it is very special when I get to introduce my friends to my hometown, through visits or virtually (like with this project). Ideally, this webpage is for people planning a visit to Chicago who are active and enjoy going out.

The extra I chose was editing the CSS to change the page for various viewports. For the home page, I made the subtext under the h2 tags disappear for tablets, and then made the center title disappear and stacked the images for the smallest viewports. For the history page, I edited the margins and made text larger for tablets, and moved images to the top to make text more readable for phone screens. For the exploring page, I stacked the columns to make the images far larger for the tablet viewports, and for the phone screens I made the p text far larger and made the images relatively smaller.
